Ribbon cutting ceremony at Boys and Girls Club

By: Meg Rossman

BUFFALO, N.Y. -- The Boys and Girls Club unveiled a new teaching room Wednesday, thanks to Time Warner Cable's Connect a Million Minds Initiative and Project CITE.

The renovated room of the Northtowns Club in Buffalo includes a drop ceiling, and a new computer network.

A van was also donated to the club to help transport children, and computers will be given out to needy families in the community.

"Unfortunately a lot of families today that still do not have computers in their homes, and they should. That's what part of this program is about," said Project CITE creator Curtis Brown.

Chief Professional Officer Phil Penichter said, "It was a room we wouldn't want to take anyone into. If you look around today, you'll see that this is a nice room, the kids enjoy being in here. It's built for the work that they do."

Time Warner Cable's Connect a Million Minds Initiative was started in 2009 and helps younger generations prepare themselves in the areas of science, technology, engineering, and math.
